How did the Fund perform last year and what affected its performance?

For the 12-month period ended June 30, 2024, the Fund underperformed its benchmark, the Russell 3000[®] Growth Index.

WHAT FACTORS INFLUENCED PERFORMANCE

Exposure to small and mid-capitalized companies weighed on the Fund's performance over the period, most notably in the third quarter of 2023 and second quarter of 2024, as the market rewarded those largest market-capitalized companies with strong free cash flow. Security selection in the Industrials industry and a relative underweight to the Technology industry also detracted from performance.

Positive contributions were led by an overweight positioning in the Consumer Discretionary industry, as strong employment trends were a tailwind for the U.S. consumer. Allocations to NVIDIA Corporation and Amazon.com, Inc. also contributed to performance over the period.

POSITIONING

The Fund had several position changes in the top 10 holdings by weight during the period. Weights in Axon Enterprise, Inc.; Netflix, Inc.; and Datadog, Inc. increased, while weights in MongoDB, Inc. and Snowflake Inc. decreased. Overall, the market capitalization exposure shifted slightly higher, and allocations to mid- and small-capitalized companies decreased. Exposure to companies economically tied to the small and mid-sized business space decreased, and exposure to Technology and Consumer non-cyclical industries increased.

PERFORMANCE

The Fund experienced a positive return for the period, as the Federal Reserve halted interest rate increases, broad inflation measures began to ease, and excitement surrounding Artificial Intelligence and the efficiencies from this new technology touched many segments of the equity market.
